Personal History Questionnaires for Tenant Farm Operators and Tenant-Wife Teams

D. Woods Thomas

Ernest J. McCormick

Robert E. Blanchard
Many Corn Belt farms are owned by absentee landlords and operated by tenants. Responsibility for many decisions concerning the organization and operation of these farms and for carrying out production plans rests with the tenant. The efficiency with which the farm's resources are employed depends on the competence of the tenant. The tenant's importance to a profitable farm business cannot be minimized. Tenant selection becomes increasingly important with larger farms, higher capital investment and technological progress in agricultural production.

Predicting the probable level of performance of prospective farm tenants is one of the major problems of landlords and farm management services. Errors in tenant selection are costly. These costs, in the form of lost farm earnings, may reach major proportions. At least one and sometimes several years pass before it is possible to recognize and replace a poor tenant. Even then, the new tenant may be no better than the one being replaced.
This manual explains the method of administering two biographical questionnaires designed to predict the probable level of performance of prospective farm tenants.* The first questionnaire is The Personal History Questionnaire for Tenant Farm Operators, Form B. This questionnaire is to be used when it is only possible to obtain biographical information from the prospective tenant. The second questionnaire, The Personal History Questionnaire for Tenant-Wife Teams, Form A, is to be used in those situations where it is possible to obtain biographical information from both the prospective tenant and his wife.

Either questionnaire, when properly scored and interpreted, will provide the farm manager or landlord with the "odds" of a prospective tenant turning out "above average." For example, analysis of one prospective tenant's questionnaire may indicate that he has only 20 chances out of 100 of being an above average tenant. Another prospective tenant may have 80 chances out of 100 of being above average. This is important information in deciding which man to choose.

The questionnaires described in this manual may be used for predicting the probable level of performance of prospective farm tenants in all situations similar to the ones in which the questionnaires were developed. They were developed from a study of tenants operating farms under professional farm management services. These farms were located in Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois. A majority of the farms were in Indiana. Distributions of farms included in the original study by type and size are given in Tables 1 and 2. The questionnaires will provide reliable predictions of prospective tenant performance on farms under professional farm management or similar managerial arrangements, in areas where farming is like that in the study area, and on farms of the types and sizes listed in Tables 1 and 2. The questionnaires should not be used in other situations.

No technique or instrument designed to predict human behavior during some future period is perfect. There is always room for the exception. Consequently, results of the questionnaires should be interpreted only as an indication of the probable performance of tenant applicants. Used in conjunction with other information, such as the applicant's financial status, credit rating, reputation, references and interests, the questionnaires will help in obtaining competent farm tenants.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE QUESTIONNAIRES

The Personal History Questionnaire for Tenant Farm Operators, Form B, should be used when it is only possible to obtain information from the prospective tenant.

The Personal History Questionnaire for Tenant-Wife Teams, Form A, should be used when it is also possible to obtain biographical information from the prospective tenant's wife. In this case, have the tenant complete Form B and his wife complete Form A.

It is important to carefully explain the directions for completing the questionnaire to each applicant. These directions are given on the front of each questionnaire. They are:

"The following questions are about your personal history, your activities, those of your family, and your work history. Answer as frankly and accurately as possible. If you are not sure which answer or answers are right for you, make the best judgement you can. Select the answer which you feel best applies to you and put an X in front of it. Check only one answer unless the question tells you to check more than one. Be sure to answer every question that applies to you."

There is no time limit for completion of the questionnaire. Each person should be given as much time as necessary to complete it accurately. Most applicants will take from 20 to 30 minutes.

SCORING AND INTERPRETING THE QUESTIONNAIRES

Upon completion, each questionnaire must be scored and interpreted. Scores and interpretations are based on known relationships between tenant performance and biographical characteristics of tenants and tenant wives. The interpretation will give the "odds" of a prospective tenant turning out "above average."

Purdue University will score and interpret completed questionnaires. A confidential report will be made to the agency or individual involved.
