Elsevier Science Table of Contents

Elsevier Science is now offering access to the Tables of Contents for more than 900 primary research and review journals over the Internet! Librarians can use the service to distribute the tables of contents of Elsevier journals held in their collections. Scientists can use the service to pinpoint citations relevant to their ongoing work, downloading the files to their own workstation. The weekly upload ensures currency of information. This outstanding current awareness tool, offered via the World Wide Web, allows users to search recent tables of contents of important peer-reviewed journals, including titles outside a user's normal disciplinary scope.

Internet Availability

The Elsevier Science Tables of Contents service (ESTOC) is one of the latest additions to the Elsevier Science World Wide Web site (http://www.elsevier.nl) which features numerous information services that will be of use to researchers, librarians and scientists. Currently our Web site provides a comprehensive catalog of all Elsevier product, hypertext links to cooperative research projects with third parties, information about the global presence of Elsevier and its activities.

As a preeminent provider of scientific, technical and medical information, Elsevier Science publishes across a broad spectrum of scientific disciplines in both print and electronic formats. By mounting files containing the tables of contents of our many prestigious journals and, using the full range of Web functionalities (hypertext, e-mail, forms, etc.), Elsevier Science has created a service that permits searching across all journal and discipline-specific boundaries. ESTOC permits searching by author, article title, journal title, cover date and ISSN. There is also the option to search abstracts! While ESTOC searches the abstracts and locates relevant articles within a journal issue, the abstract itself does not appear on screen. Consulting the printed article within the specific journal issue will yield that information.

Functionality

The user can access a table of contents in a variety of ways. Entering the service through its initial hypertext link on the Elsevier Science homepage, the user can jump to:
- an alphabetical listing of the available Elsevier titles
- a listing by discipline of journal titles
- or the user can use a number of search options.

The navigational icons used on each ESTOC page will be familiar to those users who have previously accessed our Catalog online.

For example, in the case of the scientist who is interested in seeing the most recent contents listing for Physics Reports or Tetrahedron, clicking on either the alphabetical listing of titles or the discipline-specific listing will bring up those titles. Another click will bring up the journal page, which provides a graphic image of the journal's cover, hypertext links to the aims and scope of the journal and to a listing of the editorial board members, a listing of issues that are available currently in ESTOC (i.e. all published 1995 issues) and the option of ordering a sample copy of the journal.

Clicking on a specific volume and issue number brings up the contents listing with article title, authors, and page numbers, a quick and convenient reference to locating the article. The contents file can be downloaded to an individual computer or printed out for later reference.

For a more comprehensive search, entering keywords will generate a search that looks not only at article title or journal title but also at the abstracts for each item, returning a list of results that may point the user to information in journals previously thought to be out of scope for the research at hand. Thus a quick search on the phrase "decentralized document delivery brings up" Library Acquisitions: Practice and Theory as one might expect but also a special issue of Computer Communications devoted to the topic as well as other potentially relevant journal issues.

Tell us What You Think

Take advantage of our Guest Book option to let us know what you think of ESTOC and its functionalities! The interactive nature and flexibility of the Web environment makes it easier for Elsevier Science to incorporate any necessary changes you may suggest.

The Myth of the Electronic Library
Librarianship and Social Change in America
By William F. Birdsall
Contributions in Librarianship and Information Science, No. 82
"Birdsall's gripping polemic is not to be missed. ... It reads like a courtroom drama. The author's clear intention is to expose flaws in the electronic library model and defend the virtues of traditional organizations, buildings, and roles. The fact that he is scrupulously fair in his assessment of the electronic library only adds weight to his passionate defense of the values that it negates or ignores."  College & Research Libraries

Their Rationale and Role in

Especially commendable are the papers by Joanne Euster, Anne Woodworth and Mary Westerman, and Jordan Scapeski, but the editors are to be congratulated on a compilation of consistent quality and general levelheadedness." A World of Information from Some of the Most Respected Anthropologists in the World

Until now, cultural anthropology, although the largest sub-discipline in the broad field of anthropology, has not been represented by an academically acceptable, broad-based reference work. In the last 25 years, the field has expanded at an astronomical rate. Now, more than ever, students and academics alike need a basic reference they can rely on.

They need a work that is balanced in its coverage and perspective—one that gives them up-to-date information and points them in the most fruitful directions for future research.

They need the Encyclopedia of Cultural Anthropology.

This unique and invaluable reference work is sponsored by the Human Relations Area Files, the renowned nonprofit foundation at Yale University dedicated to facilitating the cross-cultural study of human behavior, culture, and society. It is edited by Dr. David Levinson (Vice President of HRAF), and Dr. Melvin Ember (President of HRAF).

Encyclopedia of Cultural Anthropology has been prepared under the direction of a distinguished editorial advisory board of 24 eminent scholars representing a wide diversity of specialization and perspective in the discipline. This four-volume work is the most complete, up-to-date, and respected reference work in the field—helping students, academics, and professionals alike uncover the practical information they need, and survey the major perspectives, ideas, and knowledge produced by cultural anthropology.

Hard-to-Obtain Books?

MIDWEST LIBRARY SERVICE

Won't Take "NO"
For An Answer

We do not accept publishers' OP, NOP, and TOS reports without further research to determine their validity. Our research specialists are dedicated to locating hard-to-obtain titles. Their efforts consist of:

1. Verification of customer's information in BIP, Forthcoming Books, OP-OSI, CBI, etc.
2. Telephone confirmation from the publisher when there is evidence of availability.
3. Query the library when order information is in doubt.
4. Searching the market for out-of-print titles.
5. Checking for titles available in the U.K. which are often declared out-of-print in the U.S. Obtaining these books is part of our goal of "maximum fulfillment."

By diligent research we are able to locate many book orders that would otherwise be lost due to publishers' bad reports, inadequate research, or database dead-ends. Our researchers take over the hunt for titles where computers leave off. We will not cancel an order until we determine that a book is truly unavailable.
