Professor Maxwell altered his earthquake lecture based on a new tectonic plate theory. He found it in the latest book authored by his colleagues in Europe. The library got it for him. As an eBook.
Of all the ways to bring eBooks to the world, we've chosen to do it through libraries. Why? Because even the simplest advantages of eBooks, such as searchability, support how libraries serve users. But, we didn't stop there. Our complete approach encompasses MARC records, integration with OPAC systems, eBook check-out capability, content from top scholarly and reference publishers, and more. Visit us at academic.netLibrary.com or call 800-418-4557.

Access a Vastly Greater Number of Articles from AIP Online Journals

The American Institute of Physics has expanded electronic access to our large body of scientific literature — more than doubling the number of articles previously available online. We’ve created six additional years of digital archives for all of AIP’s core journals, extending our online archive back to 1991.

This initiative adds nearly 50,000 articles to AIP’s Online Journal Publishing Service platform. Institutional customers have the option to subscribe to the expanded archive of each journal for an additional $50. For The Journal of Chemical Physics and Journal of Applied Physics, the additional charge is $75.

AIP & APS Launch Online Journal Statistics Gateway

In February 2001, AIP and the American Physical Society launched the Online Journal Statistics Gateway, a Web-based service for library administrators. Librarians at institutions registered for online journal access may use the service at their convenience to view usage statistics reports for the AIP and APS online journals to which they subscribe.

Statistics for all of 2000 are available, and 2001 statistics will become available month by month. In the near future we will incorporate statistics back to January 1999, along with other planned improvements. Reports for each journal include the number of downloads of: full text articles, tables of contents, abstracts, and journal home pages. The reports will also provide the number of individual searches performed.

Virtual Journals Offer You Focused Online Article Collections

The Virtual Journal of Biological Physics Research and Virtual Journal of Nanoscale Science and Technology are freely accessible online sites that provide quick access to the latest articles in these dynamic fields. The growing list of more than 45 participating journals includes Science, Physical Review, Physical Review Letters, Reviews of Modern Physics, Journal of Applied Physics, Applied Physics Letters, The Journal of Chemical Physics, Medical Physics, and Journal of Vacuum Science and Technology.

Tables of contents show the source journal of every article and connect users to freely available abstracts. If you subscribe to one of the source journals, your patrons can link seamlessly to the full text. E-mail alerts are also available. Be sure to add these convenient sites to your list of online resources. (See www.vjnano.org/ and www.vjbio.org/.)

For more information, call us at 516-576-2411 or e-mail mktg@aip.org.

When you call to place an order, Ellen promises service with a smile. (Even if you can’t see it.)

Ellen has been helping our customers place their orders for over 10 years. She even knows many of them just by the sound of their voices. Like the rest of us at Emery-Pratt, she enjoys getting to know customers and helping them anyway she can. She answers questions about new books, helps them locate hard-to-find titles, and writes up every order to the customer’s exact specifications. And once, when a long-time customer from Virginia jokingly asked Ellen to send her some Michigan snow, Ellen put paper shreds in an envelope marked “snow seeds” and dropped them in her shipment of books (no extra charge).

Call us today. We’ll help you anyway we can.
