the grounds and see many exhibits including the new baby panda bear. Zoo employees brought some animals out of their habitats so that attendees could have a close encounter with them and even touch some of them. It was a thoroughly enjoyable experience.

During the breaks, several general trends were noted: Many libraries seem to have librarians with multiple responsibilities, often with assignments that span public services, technical services, and collection management. It seems almost every library is reorganizing some aspect of its organization structure. Many libraries are migrating to new ILS systems or upgrading their current system. The growth of electronic resources has led to the examination of workflow, staffing, and organizational metrics. Access to electronics is through multiple paths such as catalogs, Web pages, links, etc. — no standard path has yet emerged.

Each night concluded with a late night social (from 10 p.m. to 12 midnight) allowing NASIG night owls to visit, play games, listen to music, dance, have a cool drink, and get to know each other in a relaxing, social setting.

NASIG returns to Trinity University in San Antonio Texas, for its 16th annual conference, May 23-26, 2001. NASIG had its annual conference at Trinity University in 1991 and now returns ten years later. The theme of the conference is "NASIG 2001: A Serials Odyssey." Note that this conference is not only being held slightly earlier than usual, but it is held Wednesday-Saturday which is a departure from NASIG's usual Thursday-Sunday schedule. Bea Caraway and Carol Gill, Conference Planning Committee Co-Chairs are planning an especially memorable and valuable conference. Watch for information about the conference at: http://www.nasig.org. See you in San Antonio in 2001!

Bestsellers on the Middle East
by Françoise Crowell (Yankee Book Peddler) <FCrowell@YBP.com>

The Middle East continues to dominate the news with the focus on the Middle East currently exploding from politics to religion, to democracy, to tyranny and, most often, to crisis. In the last year, there have been a large number of scholarly titles on this volatile and fascinating part of the world. Of the 50 titles listed here the majority are from Trade publishers and 18 from University Presses. The expected publishers are represented: St. Martin's, Polity, and Westview, with Columbia UP contributing 4 titles and ending with a best seller by Human Rights Watch. Clearly the eyes of the western world are on the Middle East.

Serials Pricing Update — The Real Cost and Price of EJournals

by Marilyn Geller, MSLS <marilyn.geller@mindspring.com>

In the past several years, libraries have seen a significant growth in electronic resources and have worked hard to rise to the challenge of understanding and incorporating these materials into our collections. When we have a chance to catch our breath and to reflect on all the developments of these times, one might ask, “If an electronic version of a printed journal is ‘free’, how much does it really cost?” In fact, this is the question that prompted a presentation for the ALCCTS Serials Section Journal Costs in Libraries Discussion Group at the ALA 2001 Midwinter Conference.

As every good reference librarian knows, a simple question is almost never just a simple question, and this one is no different. A small sample of the underlying questions here might include: How much do ejournals cost the publisher to produce? How much do ejournals cost the library to access? What is the difference between cost and price? What is the publisher’s pricing strategy? And what does all this mean for the future of ejournal pricing?

In economic terms, cost is the outlay or expenditure of money, time and labor needed
