AGAINT THE GRAIN

TABLE OF CONTENTS

v.19 #2 April 2007 © Katina Strauch

FEATURES

The Renaissance of the eBook: Transformations and Question Marks
Guest Editor, Tony Horava

The Renaissance of the eBook: Transformations and Question Marks by Tony Horava — The eBook produces a gut reaction in people, and this ranges from skepticism and anxiety to guarded optimism and edgy excitement.

The Conundrum of eBooks and Interlibrary Loan............22 by William Gee — Surprisingly to many, Interlibrary Loan is still heavily used, especially to borrow books. So what will be is the relationship between eBooks and Interlibrary Loan?

Turning Pages: Reflections on eBooK Acquisitions & Access Challenges...28 by Lorraine Busby — How the vendor sells products should not determine how the customer rolls out the products. Uncoupling these two activities reminds us that the vendor’s business model is separate from our internal practices and procedures.

eBooKs: Acquisitions, the User, and the Future?......34 by Aline Soules — Aline believes that eBooks will endure, thrive, and evolve into a new and exciting format.

Reviews

FROM THE REFERENCE DESK..........................61

Reviews of Reference Titles by Tom Gilson — This month one of Tom’s selections is the Encyclopedia of the American Revolutionary War: a Political, Social, and Military History published by ABC-CLIO.

Rumors..................................................1 Letters to the Editor..............................6

From Your Editor....................................6 Deadlines.............................................6

FEATURES

The Renaissance of the eBook: Transformations and Question Marks
Guest Editor, Tony Horava

The Renaissance of the eBook: Transformations and Question Marks by Tony Horava — The eBook produces a gut reaction in people, and this ranges from skepticism and anxiety to guarded optimism and edgy excitement.

The Conundrum of eBooks and Interlibrary Loan............22 by William Gee — Surprisingly to many, Interlibrary Loan is still heavily used, especially to borrow books. So what will be is the relationship between eBooks and Interlibrary Loan?

Turning Pages: Reflections on eBooK Acquisitions & Access Challenges...28 by Lorraine Busby — How the vendor sells products should not determine how the customer rolls out the products. Uncoupling these two activities reminds us that the vendor’s business model is separate from our internal practices and procedures.

eBooKs: Acquisitions, the User, and the Future?......34 by Aline Soules — Aline believes that eBooks will endure, thrive, and evolve into a new and exciting format.
Legally Speaking: Drama in the Library: Always Seek Permission to Publicly Perform Scripts Even When the Library Owns Them

Copyright Column by Laura Gasaway — Questions and Answers galore!

Cases of Note: BIG MUSIC Owns the US Congress, Copyright & Trademark — First Sale Doctrine

The Devil Is In The Details: Right law affects scripts and music.

Biz of Acq: Brave New World: The Implications of Shifting to Electronic Collections by Antje Mays — The shift in academic and research libraries to electronic collections is discussed in the context of information access, costs, publication models, and preservation of content.

Dissertations into Books? The Lack of Logic in the System by Sandy Thatcher — With the book widely regarded as the “gold standard” for promotion in many of the humanistic and social scientific disciplines today, it is not surprising that the revised dissertation has become almost a necessity for a junior scholar.

Drinking From the Firehose: Too Many Passwords, Too Little Time by Eleanor I. Cook — Ain’t it the truth ...

Lead, Follow, or Get Out of the Way: Eleanor I. Cook

Too Many Passwords, Too Little Time by Bob Nardini — These are those pesky computer things — wizards, task bars, Office toolbars, toolboxes, dialog boxes, clipboards, status bars, panes, and the hateful Office Assistant. Even features that literally do nothing.

Management Succession in Libraries: Lead, Follow, or Get Out of the Way by Ruth Fischer Ready, Set, Go!: Wherein we sell books.

Web has become a great way to publicize and promote content in ways that make it useful to them.

library systems that are available.

Testing Integrated Library System Standards Column: Ready to Work Without a License? NISO’s Shared E-Resource Understanding (SERU) Working Group by Todd Carpenter — Step by step, we may yet reach a point where in many cases purchasing an electronic product will be as simple as ordering a book or journal used to be.

Booksellers Who Blog: The Tale of a Band of Booksellers, Fasicle 2: Ready, Set, Go! by Richard Abel — Wherein we learn something about setting up a business.

As I See It: Where is the Web taking our Journals?

Where is the Web taking our Journals? by John Cox — Readers want tools that analyze and structure content in ways that make it useful to them.

Library Marketplace: Booksellers Who Blog by John Riley — The Web has become a great way to publicize and sell books. John highlights some of the tools that publishers and booksellers utilize.

International Dateline: European Conference Adds Weight To Debate on Scientific Publishing by Peter T. Shepherd — One of the world’s most influential political entities is very interested in access to, dissemination, and preservation of scientific information.

LegENDA...