Standing Orders
Never underestimate the importance of a librarian.

Okay, chances are you won't actually find a librarian at the North Pole. But librarians do play a vital role on any exploration team enabling research breakthroughs and real-time solutions. Whether you're choosing information for specific research communities or decision support for professionals, Elsevier offers access to a world of information that knows no boundaries. Select from a wide range of scientific, technical and health information available in multiple media including innovative electronic products like ScienceDirect® and MD Consult. After all, getting the right information into the right hands is critical to launching any successful experiment. Building Insights. Breaking Boundaries.®
Serials Solutions delivers complete e-journal access solutions

Founded by a librarian, Serials Solutions introduced the first A-to-Z title list service for libraries. Now, we introduce you to E-Journal Access & Management Suite (E-Journal A.M.S.).

E-Journal A.M.S. includes all the customizable e-journal resources available through the traditional A-to-Z service, plus several new and upcoming features, such as E-Journal Portal and acquisition tools.

Like our other services, E-Journal A.M.S. empowers libraries of all types and sizes to realize the full value of their e-journals and aggregated databases.

Find specific titles. Browse titles by subject. View your entire collection.

Include your e-journals in your OPAC.

Full-featured OpenURL resolver. Links directly to articles.

Over one million web views per week and counting.

The Web Editions of ACS journals received more than 55 million web views for 2003. That's an average of more than one million web views per week—or more than 100 per minute. ACS journals are the most cited journals in chemistry and also the "most requested" journals according to CAS Science Spotlight<sup>SM</sup>.

For the most essential chemistry in 2004, you can count on ACS.

A New Name and New Features for AIP's Online Platform

The American Institute of Physics has retooled - and has relaunched - its Web hosting service. Known since 1997 as Online Journal Publishing Service (OJPS), the new name is Scitationsm. We've greatly upgraded our capabilities and incorporated a number of powerful new features - including the ability to download citations within articles to popular citation managers in a variety of formats. Though the name has changed, AIP will support all current links for at least a year.

Exciting New Features for 2004

In addition to the many valuable features that users have come to expect, here are just a few of the enhancements planned for Scitation in 2004 - all with the researcher in mind:

- Citation Manager... This feature will allow easy download of properly formatted reference citations of any article on Scitation.
- Author Quick Search... Author names throughout Scitation will be clickable, allowing researchers to execute a fast search for other articles by that author.
- Fast Issue Search... Every table of contents on Scitation will feature a link enabling a quick search of that issue.
- E-mail Notification Management... Users receiving table of contents alerts will be able to manage them right from their computers.
- Stored Searches... This helps researchers avoid re-keying the same long string of terms each time they wish to conduct the same search.
- Article Extras... Dynamic links will be available to other articles that may be of interest when following a specific thread of research at the abstract level.

Personalization Features Deliver Added Convenience for Your Patrons

With the release of Scitation, your patrons ability to tailor the site to their own needs has greatly increased. To begin using the personalization features below, users need only register their name, e-mail address, and affiliation. Registration is required only for access to these services:

- MyArticles... Formerly Article Collection, MyArticles still allows users to collect groups of their favorite articles. Now they can do even more, including sharing article collections with colleagues and enjoying easier management of multiple collections.
- MyPublications... This feature will offer quick access to the journals your patrons need to access frequently. They can add journals to MyPublications and easily delete them when no longer needed.
- MySubscriptions... Here users will find a convenient list of all Scitation publications to which they have access through either personal or institutional subscriptions. It is automatically updated whenever new subscriptions are added or when subscriptions expire.

NOW that you've read about the new features Scitation has to offer, why not check them out on our Website? Visit www.scitation.org today.
UNDERSTANDING

Standing Orders...

They're surly. They misbehave. They require LOTS of attention, which is why some vendors, like some libraries, find them so problematic. The biggest problems are overdue deliveries, missed volumes, and poor communication. Unfortunately, those are problems not easily solved with technology.

So why do other vendors rely so much on automated claiming messages to deal with overdue standing order deliveries? We send out email claims too, but recognize that when messages are ignored, they aren't going to be answered by sending out yet more claims. At an early point in the process, you have to put a person on the phone to get standing order problems resolved in a timely manner. It's costly, and labor intensive...and effective.

The answer's there for all to see, but you have to have the will to hire and train enough people to step in where system solutions alone won't suffice. We have that will, and the good sense to know that applying a personal touch is frequently more effective than technology alone.

Perhaps that's why so many libraries are transferring their standing orders to Franklin Book Co., Inc. They understand that we understand standing orders. Does your vendor?

One small step for man. One giant mishap for Barney Google.

On this historic day, newspapers were focused on the impending moon landing. They discussed the obstacles and—interestingly enough—were still weighing the probability of failure. Further down page one, The New York Times ran a breaking story on a young woman’s tragic death in Senator Kennedy’s car on Chappaquiddick Island. The Washington Post also featured a six-month report card of Nixon’s presidency, and a Barney Google cartoon depicting Barney tee ing off toward the wrong green. Welcome to a snapshot of history that puts the momentous in the context of the everyday. The ProQuest Historical Newspapers™ program offers easy online access to more than 150 years of newspaper content, fully digitized from cover to cover, including The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, The Christian Science Monitor, The Los Angeles Times, and The Chicago Tribune, giving you a breadth and depth of history previously unattainable.
