Charleston Conference Issue

Guest Editor, Thelma Diercks (University of Hawaii at Manoa)

Budgets, Budgeting, and Books ............. 1
by Thelma Diercks — If, as the 2004 Charleston Conference theme states, “All the World is a Stage,” Against the Grain asks, “Where have all the books gone?”

Why Books (still) Matter ......................... 20 by Niko Pfund — R.R. Bowker recently estimated the number of new titles published in the United States in 2003 at 175,000, almost a 20% increase over the previous year.

A Budget Picture: 24
The University of Oregon Libraries by Nancy Slight-Gibney — Without a doubt, the hardest category of expense to predict is the cost of electronic resources.

Books, Bytes and the Quintessential Library: 28
Information Resources Budgeting at the University of Washington by Linda Di Biase — Must books give way everywhere to bytes? Linda hopes not.

Monographic Musings from 53 Degrees North Latitude: 34
by Ila D. Scott and Fred Ziegler — The University of Alberta has continued to protect the monograph side of their budget. The library has not allocated monograph monies.

The Future of the Book: 38
by Martha Whittaker and Daniel P. Halloran — The expansion of the definition of a book to include eBooks, digital reference, and online journals will not make the need for or the use of printed material obsolete.

eBooks in China: 42
by Anthony Ferguson and Angela Ko — While the growth and development of eBooks in the West lags behind that of e-journals, the situation in China is much different.

Pacific Book Epistemologies: 52
by Nicholas Goetzfried — Although the per capita library commitment of local government administrations has always been woefully low compared to U.S. mainland standards, there have been library branches established in several villages in Guam.

Op Ed — Opinions and Editorials ... 56
Books and the Future of Collection Development by Steve McKinzie — This is what this issue is all about. Will books be around in the future?

Back Talk — Closed to Open ......... 94
by Anthony Ferguson — Tony says he is contemplating opposing “openness.” With the advent of open access, open source and open archives, he thinks the word open is over used at best and really means closed to lots of things at worst.

LEGAL ISSUES

Edited by Bryan Carson, Bruce Strauch, and Jack Montgomery

Legally Speaking ........................................... 68

The World Wide Web and Intellectual Property Law: Digital Transmitting, Linking, Framing, and Other Potential Problems by Bryan Carson — The idea of linking and framing is troubling to some specialists in intellectual property. There are both copyright issues and trademark issues involved in linking and framing. In addition, there are some other concerns, such as libel, that need to be brought up.

Questions and Answers .................................. 71

Copyright Column by Laura Gasaway — Questions and Answers galore!

Cases of Note ............................................. 72

Vicarious Copyright Liability - Grok Out by Bruce Strauch — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios and every other movie/music conglomerate v. Grokster Ltd., StreamCast Networks Inc. and a quarter page list of other outfits that sell peer-to-peer software.

Publishing

Biz of Acq .................................................. 74

Ten Years After: How Positions with a Serials Emphasis have Changed a Decade after the World Wide Web — by Rob Withers — Rob describes and compares advertisements of professional library positions with serials responsibilities, posted ten years apart.

Books Are Us ............................................. 78

by Anne Robichaux — This column covers fiction accounts of people in our industry—librarians, publishers, vendors, booksellers, etc., people like us.

And They Were There ................................... 78

Reports of Meetings — Our guest editor Thelma Diercks has reported on the Fifth Tintersine Acquisitions Institute and ALCTS President's Program at ALA Orlando. Other Mini Reports from ALA Orlando have been provided by Eleanor Cook, and Ellen McCullough, with Bob Nardini reporting on the Publisher/Vendor Library Relations Committee Meeting.

BOOKSELLING

Issues in Vendor/Library Relations ..82

Way CUL by Bob Nardini — This is way cool! After more than a year of planning and development, title records from LC and other sources are now presented to selectors through a single interface. Read all about it!

I User ....................................................... 84

Task-Based Strategic Planning: Changing Libraries Through Workflow Analysis by Rick Lugg and Ruth Fischer — Library managers can learn a great deal about their future by paying close attention to the work being done day-to-day in the library — and in technical services as much as in public services.

And Vending

Lost in Austin ............................................. 86

Reading Publishers' Catalogs by Thomas W. Leonard — Read this column on publishers’ catalogs. It will make you hungry, we promise.

Leaving the Books Behind ......................... 87

Bookshelves by Mary Tinker Massey — This one is about real books and bookshelves.

Bet You Missed It ....................................... 89

by Pamela Rose — What do Google and Wall Street have in common? Read about it in this issue!

TECHNOLOGY AND STANDARDS

Edited by Pat Harris

Webworthy ................................................. 16

by Pamela Rose — Unique and interesting Websites organized by broad subject area.

When Content Goes Digital ....................... 90

by Judy Luther — What happens to content when it appears on the Web? The print works so familiar to librarians lose their context without the wrappers that indicate their function. When encyclopedias, books, and journals are all available online, they appear simply as digital content to the user. What does this mean?

Desperately Seeking Copyright ..................... 92

Going Global: Librarians Take on International Compliance Role by Edward W. Coleran — The ease by which content can now be accessed and shared through digital means has increased the potential for copyright infringement exponentially, and colleges and universities face new compliance challenges.

Drinking From the Firehose ....................... 93

The “Poof Effect:” The Impact of E-Journals Bought and Sold by Eleanor I. Cook — We used to think that title changes were a problem. Think again! The electronic world has changed all that.

ETC.
