Thank you for your letter of 12 July to Michael Butcher about King Constantine.

The Home Secretary agrees that, should King Constantine and his family wish to settle in this country, it would be right to admit them without question and without condition, and so they would be free to stay here without restriction of any kind.

This would be in accordance with this country’s traditional attitude to former Heads of State, to whom we have frequently given refuge in the past whether we were sympathetic towards them or not.

If the Home Office receive information about the King’s plans, we shall, of course, pass this on to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Yours sincerely,

Paul White
