Two Poems: Chanda Says; Dropping Chanda Off at Nursery School

Bunkong Tuon
Union College, tuonb@union.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://docs.lib.purdue.edu/jsaaea Part of the Bilingual, Multilingual, and Multicultural Education Commons, and the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation
DOI: 10.7771/2153-8999.1185
Available at: https://docs.lib.purdue.edu/jsaaea/vol14/iss1/5

This document has been made available through Purdue e-Pubs, a service of the Purdue University Libraries. Please contact epubs@purdue.edu for additional information.
Creative and Literary Works

Two Poems

Bunkong Tuon
Union College

Chanda Says

“You’re the greatest daddy in the whole wide world.”

Her arms wrap tightly around my neck as she plants

A big fat juicy kiss on my cheek.
For a minute, I almost forgive

The Khmer Rouge. Then I remember my daughter would never know

Her Lok-Yiey and Lok-Ta.
Dropping Chanda Off at Nursery School

Tiny legs wrap around my waist, tears streaming down her flushed cheeks,
and the wailing “Daddy, Daddy, Home!”
Then the door shuts behind me.
I still hear her crying as I walk by the classroom window and carry her cries as I get in the car, drive to the college to teach the American/Viet Nam War.
The wailing continues in the cries of soldiers missing their girlfriends, wives, and families at home, wishing to spit at their fathers who talk about doing the things men must do in a world of evils, wanting to burn their town’s city hall and vandalize the draft board because no one there knows what they are going through.
The wailing is heard in the little girl stripped naked by the flaming fingers of napalm as she runs with other villagers.
The wailing is felt in the trembling silence of the boy in My Lai who hides underneath the warm bodies of his aunt, younger sister, and mother.
About the Author

Bunkong Tuon, a Cambodian-American writer, critic, professor, and, most importantly, father. He is the author of Gruel (New York Quarterly Books, 2015), And So I Was Blessed (New York Quarterly Books, 2017), and Dead Tongue (with Joanna C. Valente, forthcoming from Yes Poetry), as well as a contributor to Cultural Weekly. Nominated for the Pushcart numerous times, his poetry recently won the 2019 Nasiona Nonfiction Poetry Prize. He has completed a book of poems about raising his daughter in contemporary America. He is an associate professor of English and Asian Studies at Union College in Schenectady, New York.
Doctoral Student Editorial Review Board

Linh Dang
University of Rochester

My-Lan Huynh
California State University East Bay

Hoa Nha Nguyen
Boston College

Thien-Huong Ninh
University of Southern California

Krissyvan Truong
Claremont Graduate University

Melissa Vang
San Diego State University

Nielsen Hul
Cornell University

Bao Diep
University of Minnesota

Annie BichLoan Duong
San Joaquin County Office of Education

Dung Minh Mao
University of Minnesota

Khoi Nguyen
George Mason University

Linda Marie Pheng
University of Wisconsin-Madison

Mai Vang
University of Massachusetts Boston

Soua Xiong
San Diego State University

Diana Chandara
University of Minnesota

Thong Vang
University of Minnesota