2nd (Inter)National Writing Centers Conference St. Louis, MO 28-30 September 1995

The National Writing Centers Association (NWCA), in conjunction with the Midwest Writing Centers Association (MWCA), is pleased to announce the 2nd (Inter)National Writing Centers Conference, on September 28-30, 1995 in St. Louis, Missouri.

Recognizing writing center diversity, the conference will offer many topics and presentation formats. Anticipated topics include:

elementary, secondary and post-secondary writing centers; publishing, scholarship, and professional activity; writing centers and technology; writing centers in electronic environments; writing centers' new frontiers; special needs; administrative systems; mission statements and longitudinal plans; a mentor network; writing center history; critical reconsiderations of theory and practice; disseminating research projects; developing outreach and service projects; initial and advanced staff training; defining NWCA's agenda.

The program will consist of workshops, interactive sessions, working sessions, demonstrations, poster presentations, and formal papers.

All interested parties—writing center directors, staff, consultants, personnel; writing teachers; undergraduate and graduate students in composition studies; writing program, public, and private school administrators; staff development leaders, etc.—around the world are invited to submit proposals for the conference. Specific proposal guidelines and other relevant information are listed in the proposal form.

Deadline: February 1, 1995 (notification by March 1, 1995). For proposal forms and further information, contact Eric Hobson, Conference Chair, St. Louis College of Pharmacy, 4588 Parkview Pl., St. Louis, MO 63110. Phone 314-367-8700, ext. 244. E-mail: ehobson@medicine.wustl.edu
