Providing Access to Electronic Journals: The Ohio University Experience .......... 1
by Laura Hudson and Laura Windsor — The 20th century, has seen an exponential increase in electronic journals creating exciting challenges for library staff. The focus of this paper is on the scholarly electronic journal.

Periodical agents have been part of the library and publishing scene for over 200 years, but what are the chances of their survival in the electronic marketplace?

Approaching Clairvoyance: Notes toward Selection for Off-Site Shelving .......... 23
by Margaret K. Powell (Yale University Library)

While library additions, and indeed entire new libraries, are still being constructed, hard economic truths and dreams of the digital collection have reduced our ability and our desire to construct traditional libraries at the same rate as the growth and addition of material demand.

Op—Ed — Opinions and Editorials — In Praise of Engineers ......................... 29 by Bob Schatz — Quietly standing behind architects are a cadre of engineers who are heroes in their own right, but who get much less recognition.

Here’s Looking At: Yankee Rights Management ........................................... 36
Copyright management, for both copyright owners and users, has been identified as one of the most difficult problems facing us in the online world. So, with an eye towards solving problems and facilitating online communication, Glen Seeor has decided to tackle the copyright issue head-on.
