Acquiring Minds Want to Know — Library Liaison Programs

Guest Editor: Joyce Ogburn (U. of Washington)

An Academic Liaison Program:	1	Collaboration and Reallocation:	40
------------------------------------	---	---------------------------------------	----

Making it Work by Helen Williams — With the deluge of information on how technology is changing the face, mission, and infrastructure of libraries, there is an increased need for strategies to deal with these changes as they affect our core programs.

The Successful Liaison Program: 22

Librarians and Classroom Faculty As Partners in the Instructional Process by Irene K. Risser, Marjorie White and Geraldine Benson — This program is designed to coordinate the basic components of the university library curriculum, comprising information services, collection development, and library instruction.

College Librarians: 28

Partners in Acquisitions and Serials Management by Ladd B. Brown, Molly Brennan Cox, and Nancy H. Seamans — Library services at Virginia Tech in Blacksburg, Virginia, are physically centralized.

Collection Development 34

for the Digital Age by Sandra S. Kerbel — We now have an opportunity to involve ourselves in the pre-publication activities of the scholarly communication process by guiding, directing, and organizing the intellectual content as a product for the digital environment.

Implementing a New Collection Development Model by Janis M. Bandelin and John K. Payne — The distribution of library resource funds to academic departments/disciplines at many college and university libraries is often based on historical tradition with little rationale behind it. The escalating cost of serials in certain disciplines exacerbates the challenge of fairly allocating monies.

Op Ed — Opinions and Editorials ... 46

A Publishing view of the SPARC Initiative by Anthony Watkinson — Anthony was initially impressed by SPARC. How does he feel now?
