Greetings and Happy Holidays! Your editor is locked in the throngs of a monumental library move. The College of Charleston Library is only moving a block away but, my goodness, that’s significant when you’re moving thousands of books. Hallie Mores have been fantastic.

Meanwhile, back at the ATG house, we have been putting together the Dec./Jan. issue. Cris Ferguson of Furman University has been a life-saver. In this issue, which is on the new “new” collection development, we have the Charleston Conference keynote paper from Mike Keller, “Deconstructing collection development.” Other papers are from Milton T. Wolf, Jennifer Knevel, Heather Wicht and Lynn Silipigni Connaway, Lynn Johnson Corcoran and Charles Marlor, Ezra Schwartz, and Heather Miller. And there are many first-hand reports from people who attended the conference. (And the proceedings will be published by Greenwood Press/Libraries Unlimited in 2005, watch for them.) And, in this issue, we also have an interview with Amy Knapp, Harriet Bell, Warren Holder, and Spencer de Groot about Scopus. And there are also some great columns devoted to institutional digital repositories (Ann Lally), human resources management (John Fenner & Audrey Fenner), eliminating low-value tasks (Ruth Fischer and Rick Lugg), and ISBN-13 (Eric Thronsdon). That’s just the tip of the iceberg. Or should I say, the “moving cart.”

Speaking of moving, there are shelves to be adjusted, books and pamphlets to be dusted, and chairs to be relocated. Everywhere there’s something to do!

Happy New Year and see you in Boston! Yr. Ed.

Dear Editor:

Good morning!

I have just read the September 2004 edition of ATG (the Reference Publishing issue) [v.16#4] and have found it so enlightening that I’d like to buy a couple of copies to share with some of my remote colleagues. Is that possible?

Thanks much, Nat Bruning, Publisher Relations Manager

lion-volume collection like Temple’s, educating every student to be a wise and savvy user of information regardless of where he or she finds it, building paper-based and electronic collections that are deep and broad, and providing comfortable, safe spaces with widespread Internet access where students can study, meet and learn, even at 3 a.m. “It also means using technology to bring the library and its services beyond the walls of the library building and beyond the boundaries of the campus to make them truly available anytime, anywhere,” Alford added.

Robert N. Snyder, Chairman of Cambridge Information Group, Inc., has announced the promotion of James P. McGinty to Vice-Chairman and the promotion of Andrew M. Snyder to President. James McGinty will be responsible for overall strategic planning, executive development, and exploratory opportunities in overseas opportunities, including the RefWorks joint venture. Jim has been President of the Cambridge Information Group for four years, after spending eight years as president of its CSA division. He is a veteran of more than two decades with the Dun and Bradstreet Corporation, serving during his last assignment as Managing Director of D&B North Pacific. Jim is a long-time member of the Software and Information Industry Association and has served on its board of directors (when it was the Information Industry Association) from 1984 to 1988; he has also served on the board of NAFAIS, the National Federation of Abstracting and Information Services. Jim is currently serving on the management board of the Sotheby’s Institute of Art—London.

Andrew Snyder, currently Executive Vice President of the Cambridge Information Group, will succeed McGinty as President. He will be responsible for the activities of all Cambridge Information Group operating units. Snyder joined the Cambridge Information Group in 2003. Before that, he was Vice President in the Principal Investment Area of Goldman Sachs where he focused on investments in media, information, and business services industries, leading Goldman Sachs’ investments in nearly a dozen companies. Prior to that assignment, he spent a year as the Assistant to the Chairman of Goldman Sachs. Snyder was awarded a J.D. degree from Georgetown University, graduating Magna Cum Laude; he also holds B.S. degrees (Cum Laude) from the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania. The Cambridge Information Group is a privately owned group of companies in information services, bibliographic publishing and education. Founded in 1971, CIG is headquartered in Bethesda, Maryland, and has over 1,000 employees throughout the U.S., Australia, Hong Kong, Japan, Europe and the United Kingdom. Its operating companies include RR Bowker and CSA. It also owns the Sotheby’s Institute of Art—London and is a partner in RefWorks, the Web-based bibliographic management service. www.csa.com/press

The Institute of Museum and Library Services, in conjunction with the Corporation for Public Broadcasting has released guidelines for the Partnership for a Nation of Learners (PNL) Community Collaboration Grants, which are designed to support new and existing lifelong learning collaborations between museums, libraries, and public broadcasters. Eligible projects include collaborations between a public broadcasting licensee (radio or television) and a museum or library, or among all three types of organizations. Projects that involve all three types of organizations will generally be considered more competitive for funding. Grant amounts will range from $25,000 to $250,000. And, speaking of Google Scholar. This is creating quite a stir in academic circles.

And another Google innovation has been overshadowed by Google Scholar. It’s Google Print. In case you missed this NYT article... (requires free reg.
