thing is certain — many of us are investing a huge amount of time dealing with eBook licensing and acquisitions, and this needs to change. It is not sustainable in the long term, and efficiencies of scale and workflow need to be developed. The question of digital rights management bedevils us at every turn, and undermines our clients' ability to use eBooks for research and learning. The fact that business approaches and access methods have not evolved towards a standard model, in contrast to eJournals, reflects the problematic state of the eBook industry for academia. eBooks are in catchup mode. We are in a period of rapid transformation that is rife with opportunities and bewildering with complications. I find it a fascinating time (although it can be equally frustrating, depending on the day!). Every day there are new questions to confront.

Being closely involved in eBook licensing and acquisitions, I was very happy to have the opportunity to develop an issue of Against the Grain devoted to the eBook, following on Cris Ferguson's excellent vendor survey in the November 2006 issue. In this issue, our contributors examine the impact of eBooks on libraries from the frontlines. Public service issues, workflow integration, and the implications for collection development are raised. Michael Levine-Clark from the University of Denver assesses the challenges for integrating eBooks into approval plans. He notes that "It is not so clear that all publishers recognize the need to supply their books electronically in a way that makes them fit easily into the library acquisition process." Annis Lee Adams from University of Hawaii at Manoa compares the content and functionality of four major eBook collections in medicine. She points out that "we need to communicate the strengths, weaknesses and desired innovations to the vendors at every opportunity, so that the vendors understand the features important to us." Millie Jackson from Florida State University examines the issues of title by title eBook selection versus acquiring eBook collection packages. She observes that "there is an increased need for evaluation procedures and policies and for marketing the items we purchase." Barbara Williams from the University of Arizona presents an analysis of engineering students' use of an eBooks database versus printed sources. She observes that "Engaging in intellectual exchange paves the path to mutual understanding and informed decision-making." William Gee from East Carolina University addresses the many challenges of eBooks for an interlibrary loans service, arguing that "Libraries and publishers simply must find methods either to truly loan eBooks or at the very least methods to cheaply and automatically rent them." Lorraine Busby from the University of Western Ontario reflects on the complex issues of eBook acquisitions, pricing models, and access. She notes that "The lack of consistency and the variety of options at the point of purchase should give librarians cause to pause and consider workflow repercussions

HOW/WHERE DO I SEE THE INDUSTRY IN FIVE YEARS: If we can find simpler ways of presenting the gamut of quality resources to our clients, and integrating services and collections, we can raise the profile of the library. We need to become more sensitive to the expectations and needs of clients, and influencing vendors to provide scholarly content and intuitive interfaces.

The emergence of new scholarly communication systems, and the debate over intellectual property/copyright issues, will loom large. We need to be at the forefront of this discourse to demonstrate how relevant we are to these issues. 🌱 and how much staff effort is needed to manage a digital format." Aline Soules from East Cal State University discusses the impact of licensing and acquisitions on the limitations of how eBooks are used. She observes that, "The possibilities and permutations are only going to increase. Now is the time for acquisitions to
