Preserving a Historic Legacy: The HBCU Library Alliance	1	Preparing for the Future: Strategic Planning and Leadership in Special Collections	30
by Loretta O'Brien Parham and Janice R. Franklin, Ph.D. — Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) evolved from a segregated south with a mission to educate newly freed slaves that had been emancipated. In spite of struggles to survive, historically black colleges and universities have flourished.		by Roland Barksdale-Hall — What are the implications for HBCU Libraries and African-American collections, in particular, if administrators focus more upon information literacy and leadership development in the future?
Accessing Historic Africana Collections at HBCU Libraries	20	The Greatest Taboo and the HBCU 34
by Akilah Nosakhere — A review of digital Africana (Black) collections created by Archives and Special Collections departments at HBCU Libraries and an examination of the processes leading to the planning and funding of these digital initiatives.		by Alfred Willis — This article investigates how well the HBCU Libraries are meeting the challenge of developing collections that both reflect and support ongoing work in the field of gay and lesbian studies.
Using Common Vendors, Joint Approval Plans, and Shared Acquisitions Databases to Enhance Cooperative Collection Development	26	The Persistence of Perception	38
The Africana Collections at the Libraries of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Duke University by Luke Swindler and Terry B. Hill — The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Duke libraries recently pioneered the use of common vendors, joint approval plans, and shared acquisitions databases to expand their cooperative collection development programs for African Studies.		by Glenda Alvin — The best way to combat the persistence of perception that a collection has insufficient resources is to take every opportunity to emphasize its capabilities. The perception of inadequate resources was not born in a day and it will not go away quickly.
		Op Ed — Opinions and Editorials ... 40
		Forget about Sleeping by Karen Hunter — What constitutes value in the online environment and how is value related to pricing?
		Back Talk	86
		by Tony Ferguson — What do Fat Wong's Szechwan Chicken Restaurant and America's research libraries have in common?
