FEATURES

ALA Midwinter Issue — The New “New” Collection Development

Guest Editor, Chris Ferguson (Furman University)

Reconstrucing Collection

Development 1

by Michael Keller — Mike's keynote speech at the 2004 Charleston Conference exhorted all of us to rethink our approaches to collection development.

Whither The Book? 20

by Milton T. Wolf — While there is no doubt that the topic of significant concern to most librarians during the last decade has been the cost, management, and growth of serial subscriptions, especially in electronic format, the plight of the book, its continuous and gradual decline in academic collections, has largely been a matter of secondary importance. Not so at the 2004 Charleston Conference.

Collection Analysis Using Circulation, Ill, and Collection Data 24

by Jennifer Knieval, Heather Wicht, and Lynn Silipigni Connaway — This study was initiated to compile statistics for collection development decision making at the University of Colorado at Boulder.

Something Ventured, Something

Gained: 26

Acquiring Resources for a New Doctoral Program by Lynn Johnson-Corcoran and Charles S.L. Marlor — A Lively Lunch program at the 2004 Charleston Conference dealt with the trials and tribulations experienced by the Library at Central Connecticut State University. Here is a brief history of the school and the ensuing saga.

The Iceberg Problem — 28

Is the Investment in Our Collections Visible to Patrons? by Ezra Schwartz — This article follows Ezra's presentation at the 2004 Char-

ton Conference. It represents his developing ideas as well as an attempt to open and expand the discourse on user interface, which has been traditionally marginalized and approached from a narrow technical perspective.

Books and The Internet: 32

Buying, Selling and Libraries by Heather Miller — The advent of the Internet has brought numerous opportunities and challenges to all involved in the creation and maintenance of library collections. A Charleston Conference discussion focused on this topic.

Plagiarism, Googling, and the Mouse: 34

Is The Internet Killing Our Ability To Do Research? by William M. Hannay — A Presentation to the 24th Annual Charleston Conference. It is undeniable that the Internet has become the single greatest tool for academic dishonesty ever made available to high school and college students. Cheating and plagiarism often arise in a vacuum created by routine, lack of interest and overwork.

Op Ed — Opinions and Editorials ... 40

Putting Email In Its Place by Ellen Finnie Duranceau — We all know email is unsurpassed as a communication tool for things like sending out an agenda or a document to review prior to a meeting. So why, then, has Ellen come to think of email as a burden as much as it is a gift?

Back Talk 94

Library Heroes, Patience, Stories with Happy Endings, and Problems Yet Unsolved by Tony Ferguson — A summary of Tony's impressions of the ten or so libraries he visited over a long weekend as part of the Hong Kong Library Association group's delegation to the Ninth Academic Conference of the Zhejiang Provincial Society for Library Science.

ATG INTERVIEWS

Focus on the Scopus Design Process 42

by Judy Luther — An interview with Amy Knapp, Harriet Bell, Warren Holder, and Spencer de Groot about Scopus.

ATG PROFILES ENCOURAGED

Edited by Allison Mays

John Fenner, Consultant, Greensboro, NC 64

REVIEWS

From the Reference Desk 48

Reviews of Reference Titles by Tom Gilson — Encyclopedia of the Arctic; and Berkshire Encyclopedia of Human-Computer Interaction are just two of the titles reviewed in this issue.

Book Reviews 50

Monographic Musings by Debbie Vaughn — In this issue, take a look at books on the natural environment and your library Web environment.
