Library Collections	1	Are New Technology and New Business Models Leading to a New Literature?	38
---------------------------	---	---	----

Will They Still Need Us When Everything is Online and Findable by the Major Search Engines? by Margaret Landesman — What does the future hold for library collections?

Convenient, Communitarian, Interactive, & Media Rich Collections 18

by Daniel R. Lee — The materials we buy, borrow, or build for students will need to be viewable in the tools they use, and available where they normally look, or risk being ignored.

If It's Not Digital It Does Not Exist 22

The Future of Science and Technology Collection Development by Johann van Reenen — Our only real option in our changing electronic environment is to capitalize on emergent systems. The author hopes to begin a debate.

Collection Development & SURVIVAL in the "Mostly Digital" Library 28

by Dr. Michael Stoller — The vast archival holdings of our special collections, millions of linear feet of correspondence, manuscripts and realia, while they will certainly be the objects of selective conversion and the source of wonderful digital exhibits, don't at present suggest a viable business model for mass digitization.

Is Access to Government Information Getting Better or Worse? 32

by Katherine Holvoet — The simple answer is yes, access to government information is getting better and worse.

Missing Information and the Long Tail: 34

How Distributed Collection Development Assures the Continued Relevance of Libraries by Amy Brunvand — The Web has not solved the problem of missing information. It has merely changed the nature of the problem.

LEGAL ISSUES

Edited by Bryan Carson, Bruce Strauch, and Jack Montgomery

Legally Speaking 70

John Doe and the PATRIOT Act by Bryan Carson — There have been two cases where the NSL (National Security Letters) provisions of the PATRIOT Act have been challenged.

Cases of Note 72

Piling on Ebay via Patent Litigation by Bruce Strauch — Well, with our finger ever on the pulse of legal trends in USA, we've been chattering in ATG about the Supreme Court reining in frivolous patent suits, and here we have one.

PUBLISHING

Biz of Acq 74

Big Deal E-Journals Packages and Third Party Subscription Vendors: Does It Make Sense Anymore? by Chad Hutchens — Is it a good option for libraries of all sizes to use vendors' services in managing electronic resources?

From the University Presses 77

by Peter Givler — What do university presses and university libraries have in common, and how do they differ?

And They Were There 78

Reports of Meetings — SALALM Annual Conference and ALA New Orleans.

BOOKSELLING AND VENDING

Drinking From the Firehose 80

Two Responses to "Top 10 Suggestions to Publishers of E-Journals" by Eleanor Cook — Robert Boissy and Linda Beebe respond.

Case Studies in Collection and Technical Services 82

Case Study Four: The Big Collection Assessment Project — The Bane of a Selector's Existence, or a Beautiful Zen Experience? by Anne Langley — How will you find time to review your stack areas for the collection assessment project. Here are some tips.

Little Red Herrings 83

Reading at Risk by Mark Herring — The National Endowment for the Humanities released a shocking study (Reading at Risk: A Survey of Literary Reading) barely two years ago showing a rapid and sharp decline in reading over the last 20 years.

TECHNOLOGY AND STANDARDS

Innovations Affecting Us 62

Electronic-Only Format for New Journal Publication: A Medium for Innovation by Kristen DeVoe — Despite the opportunities that electronic-only journals have, through the use of technology and the Internet as a publishing medium, to make a successful impact in their intended fields many have failed.

I Hear the Train A Comin' 92

by Greg Tananbaum — What is Web 2.0? What exactly does it mean? The phrase was coined by computer book mogul Tim O'Reilly in 2004. A quick look at O'Reilly's explanation yields more candy floss than steak. However, O'Reilly's five page explanation is actually quite good.
