Metadata for Digitization Projects

Guest Editors, Sheila Bair and Pam Cowart

Digitization Projects and Metadata 1

by Sheila Bair and Pam Cowart — *What happens when content escapes its container? How will digital assets be preserved? What schema will be used to describe them? What system will house them? Contributors to this issue of Against the Grain emphasize the importance of coordinating with catalogers from the beginning of any digitization initiative.*

Planning for Metadata: the Quick

Tour 20

by Jody Perkins — Jody gives a conspectus of the essential matters that planners of a digital project need to take into consideration. Her excellent checklist includes sixteen vital points to consider when evaluating a collection. She discusses metadata design, choosing schemas and standards, and documenting decisions.

Discrete Criteria for Selecting and

Comparing Metadata Schemes..... 28

by Jeffrey Beall — Reflecting further on schema selection, Jeffrey enumerates twelve points of comparison to help one decide which of the many schemas available best suits one's digital project.

Zen and the Digital Collection

Librarian..... 32

by James Bradley — *A pair of case studies discuss the efficacy, for a digital image collection, of CONTENTdm and Dublin Core.*

Digital Collections, the Next

Generation 37

Transitioning to METS for Science Fiction Digitization Project by Jen Wolfe and Mark Anderson — *Jan and Mark review the difficulties and decision-making involved in opting for DigiTools and METS to provide access to a collection of science fiction fanzines.*

Balancing the Needs of Producers and

Managers of Digital Assets through

Extensible Metadata Normalization.... 41

by Arwen Hutt, Trish Rose-Sandler and Bradley D. Westbrook — These authors share one library community's successful approach to metadata preservation, a hot topic that the digital library community must concern itself with, especially complex problems of long-term usability.

Op Ed 44

The Devil Is In The Details by Mary Ann Liebert — *One has only to look at PLoS to comprehend that the open access model — the author funded model — has not supported the publishing endeavor in spite of enormous and ongoing philanthropic support.*

ATG Special Report..... 45

Cataloging eBooks: an Overview of Issues and Challenges by Kristin Martin — As the volume of eBook content grows, libraries are grappling with how to integrate this content into their online catalogs.
