Rightsizing Access to Journals and Databases — Guest Editor, Robin Kinder

Rightsizing Access to Journals and Databases	1	Divide and Analyze: GW's Approach to Serials Cancellation	24
by Robin Kinder — Robin has collected seven articles that affirm the importance of serial review processes in an era of declining resources.		by David Killian, Debbie Bezanson and Robin Kinder — Beginning in 2016, the George Washington University Libraries realized they had to make significant reductions in continuations costs over the next five years.
Data Informed and Community Driven: Using Data and Feedback Loops to Manage a Journal Review and Cancellation Project	12	Big Deal Whack-A-Mole.....	27
by Hilary M. Davis and Gregory K. Raschke — This article describes strategies to create data-informed, community-driven feedback loops and communication that fosters deeper engagement with the campus community at all levels.		by Roy Ziegler — In the spring of 2015, cancellation of resources was on the table at FSU. The challenge of providing the most content at the most sustainable cost will never end.

Finding the Silver Lining... in the Serials Budget Crisis.....	16	Canceling Serials Based on their Availability in Aggregated Full-Text Databases	30
by M. Brooke Robertshaw, Michaela Willi Hooper and Kerri Goergen-Doll — Based on discussions with faculty, six lessons were learned that can guide ongoing practices and will hopefully help others.		by Anthony Raymond — This is about the SCU library experience regarding options for the significant immediate and long-term cost-savings academic libraries can achieve in response to a budget shortfall, or simply because the money saved can be put to better use.

Taking New Aim at an Old Problem: Serials Management at the University of Oregon Libraries	19	Op Ed	34
by Mark R. Watson — Subject librarians must play an enhanced role in serials management with continual assessment and evaluation rather than the boom-or-bust cycle of serial review.		Carla Hayden, the American Library Association and Where We Go from Here by Steve McKinzie — Librarians of Congress have not always had ALA-accredited degrees. Is an ALA-accredited degree essential for the Librarian of Congress?

Journal Publishers' Big Deals: Are They Worth It?	22	Back Talk	78
by Stéphanie Gagnon — The Université de Montréal collections analysis project has resonated with other Canadian universities and is currently being implemented by 28 of them.		The Most Beautiful Invention by Jim O'Donnell — Should the single taxonomy of the cataloging system always and everywhere determine how books are presented on library shelves? Knocking them out of call number order, even if only for a few months, may turn out to be good for them and good for our users. If that experiment seems fruitful, what else?
