FEATURES

Assessment in Libraries — Guest Editors: Shannon L. Farrell and Kristen L. Mastel

Assessment in Libraries.....	1	Assessing e-journal post-cancellation access.....	28
by Shannon L. Farrell and Kristen L. Mastel — Outreach activities have traditionally not been formally assessed, or if they were, they focused on simple quantitative measures like head counts. This issue of ATG aims to examine some of the major issues and also provide incisive commentary from a range of contributors.		by Sunshine Carter and Yumiko Toyota-Kindler — A post-cancellation access determination (PCAD) project uncovered various challenges unique to serial publications. The authors share their experience with determining PCA at the University of Minnesota and outline recommendations for other PCA projects.
Enhancing the Rigor of Common Library Assessment Activities.....	14	Assessing the Success of Library Published Journals.....	30
by Craig E. Smith — Craig limits the scope of this article to assessment involving human data, and to a small number of ways of increasing rigor that are not overly burdensome. This is an observation of places where relatively easy opportunities for improvement exist.		by Emma Molls — This paper will discuss UMN Libraries Publishing's development of journal-level goals to assess publication-level success and, in turn, assess the success of a library publishing program.
Outreach Assessment: A Two-Pronged Approach.....	17	Assessing Library Competencies for the Future: The LibGOAL Toolkit for Success.....	33
by John Jackson — The mother lode of outreach assessment will be found when someone develops a way to combine multiple data points into a single indicator of success.		by Steven Bell, Marta Brunner, Jennifer Ferguson, Elliot Felix, Emily Kessler, Kelly Sanford, and David Woodbury — This article will detail the process by which a group of thinkers and doers came together to identify essential competencies and develop a toolkit to help both new and seasoned academic library professionals prepare for their future.
Asking the Right Questions: Bridging Gaps Between Information Literacy Assessment Approaches.....	20	Op Ed — Epistemology.....	36
by Alison J. Head, Alaina C. Bull and Margy MacMillan — Drawing on combined experience at community colleges and universities in the U.S. and Canada and Project Information Literacy (PIL) , this article introduces a typology for classifying and critiquing four levels of information literacy assessment — micro, meso, macro, and mega.		Power, Control, and the Quest for Open Infrastructure by T. Scott Plutchak — Every one of us operates out of a multiplicity of motivations in almost everything that we do yet every organization that has a mission needs to have a sound financial structure.
Assessing Print Acquisitions at UMN Libraries.....	24	Back Talk.....	94
by Julie Rashid — This article attempts to pull out the highlights of recent acquisitions assessment initiatives (2005-2014), outline current assessment activities (2015-present) and reflect on what the future may hold for print acquisitions.		Speaking of Bathrooms? by Jim O'Donnell — Jim stresses that good restrooms make for good students who get good grades. And student success is our day job.

REFERENCE PUBLISHING ISSUE

REVIEWS

- Collecting to the Core 47
Gegenwartsromane, Contemporary German-Language Novels by Heidi Madden — Monographic works that are essential to the academic library within a particular discipline.
- Reader's Roundup 50
- Monographic Musings & Reference Reviews by Corey Seeman — When asked to do the impossible, the industrious Corey does. Now he features both library-focused works and reference works with a new title, recalling "Woody's Roundup" from Toy Story 2!
- Booklover 53
- Liquidation by Donna Jacobs — Donna's next Nobel choice, Imre Kertész's Liquidation — a random selection from the list of Nobel Literature Laureates "because the novel's title was delightfully intriguing."
- ATG Food + Beverage Roundup 70
- Charleston, SC by Nicole Ameduri and Melanie Masserant — We are printing this column early to give us all time to plan our visit to Charleston restaurants! Read on!

LEGAL ISSUES

Edited by Bruce Strauch and Jack Montgomery
