Child
I fear for you.

You have
love
language
mind
friends
joy.

We have
school
school
school.

We make you
competitive
consumers
computer friendly
compliant
bored
with history
doubtful of your worth.

We do this in fear
of your curiosity and joy:
where grass is a rug for trees to dance upon (Susan, age 7).

We are blind
to your strengths:
If you were the graceful birch
we would criticize your immobility.

We reduce you
to a knowledge count
with state tests
tests void of numbers
for creativity
for initiative
for citizenship.

WHITE HOUSE SEeks
TO CURB PILLS USED
TO CALM THE YOUNG

RISKS WOULD BE OUTLINED

National Study Is Planned to Look at Effect of Psychiatric Drugs on Preschoolers

Education and Culture Summer 2000 Vol. XVI No. 2
We see you as imperfect
raw
to be machined
in factory schools:
Hours are leaves of life and I am their gardener (S.M., age 11).

In an interview, Dr. Steven E. Hyman, director of the National Institute of Mental Health, said, "As a rule of thumb, doctors, psychologists and social workers should attempt to modify the behavior of a child and deal with family crises before drugs are prescribed."

We give you the idols of Market Economics.

We fear democracy.

We fear the poor
may
inherit the earth.

Child
I care for
You.

Do
not
bring guns to school.

Our
World
Is
Mad
Enough.

by Dick Gibboney
University of Pennsylvania
Professor Emeritus of Education