July 2016

The Grass Really Is Sometimes Greener

Forrest E. Link

The College of New Jersey, linkfe@tcnj.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://docs.lib.purdue.edu/atg

Part of the Library and Information Science Commons

Recommended Citation

DOI: https://doi.org/10.7771/2380-176X.6124

This document has been made available through Purdue e-Pubs, a service of the Purdue University Libraries. Please contact epubs@purdue.edu for additional information.
The Grass Really Is Sometimes Greener

by Forrest E. Link (Acquisitions Librarian, The College of New Jersey; Phone: 609-771-2412; Fax: 609-637-5158) <linkf@tcnj.edu>

Some thirty years ago, when Katina Strautch convened the first Charleston Conference, an idea came of age. This idea was that publishers, vendors, and librarians have much in common and should interact more deeply. As this notion took hold, and as the conversations fostered by the Conference and, later by its offshoot, Against the Grain, continued, it became a commonplace that they share not just the usual lofty goals, but also overlapping skill sets. That is, the experiences gained by working in publishing or librarianship are of value to — and transferable to — the vendor community. Likewise, experience in librarianship or the vendor community can be valuable to publishers. Vendors and publishers began to recruit and hire librarians. The boundaries between these communities became more fluid.

But despite the common set of skills and values found at publishers, vendors, and librarians, workplace cultures can differ dramatically. Eighteen months ago (has it really been that long?), when I joined the ranks of academic librarians after a long career in book-selling, I understood some aspects of my work life would be different — going to the same office every day, buying stuff instead of selling stuff, having colleagues physically on-hand, and, most significantly, having supervisory responsibility for a workgroup instead of working independently — but I didn’t appreciate how different. Having spent over 25 years visiting libraries and working with librarians everyday, I thought I knew libraries. I was wrong. What I knew was library acquisitions and collection development. I had the skills, but I needed to learn the culture. It was this realization that different sorts of librarians inhabit truly different worlds that led me to suggest to Katina that some of my observations might be of interest to other librarians curious about changing fields within the profession.

This resulted in an occasional column in Against the Grain. Subsequently, we thought it might be interesting to hear other voices.

In this collection of articles, six librarians who have crossed the vendor/publisher/librarian boundary give us their perspectives on the differences in workplace culture and lessons they learned along the way.

In “Changing Glasses: Does Our World Look Different as a Vendor or a Librarian,” Corey Seeman, the Director of the Kresge Business Administration Library, Ross School of Business at the University of Michigan (Ann Arbor), reflects on his career path which took him from a small, special library to the world of an ILS vendor and then the academic library administration. He proffers his belief that the commercial side of librarianship is not so different.

If Rumors Were Horses

The gorgeous Xan Arch wrote me the other day to say that she would like to have a hiatus from her column for the next few issues of ATG! Why? Because she and her husband are expecting their first baby this June (yay!) and things are getting pretty crazy preparing for leave from work and the new baby. Xan says she doesn’t know how much time she will have to write and maybe baby naptime will be good column-writing time! Either way, Xan promises that she will be back at work by October and should be ready to resume normal writing. And hopefully come to Charleston! Golly gee whiz!

So sad. Deb Vaughn’s mother, Helen “Sue” Vaughn, of Clemson, SC, passed away several days ago. I remember meeting Sue at Deb’s engagement party and she was a kind and caring woman just like her daughter. Our thoughts and prayers are with you and Bo and the family, Deb.

Speaking of Deb, the review of Michael Gorman’s book Broken Pieces in Deb’s column in the Feb issue of ATG, caused a great sensation. Did you see it in the last issue (v.24#1, p.40-41). The Charleston Conference working group had been talking about Michael and how continued on page 6

What To Look For In This Issue:

Niche Research, Silos, and Collection Development................................. 58

Price Models for Print Books............ 74

Today’s Academic Library: Student-Centered and Convenient... 78

Interviews

Leslie Strauss............................... 38
Max Phua..................................... 41
Dr. Mehdi Khosrow-Pour............... 43

Profiles Encouraged

Corey Seeman............................... 18
Kate Kosturski............................... 26
SkyRiver Technology Solutions....... 38
IGI Global..................................... 44

Plus more.................. See inside

Pictured above is Heather Miller’s granddaughter, Natalie. Heather says she is a very happy, agreeable baby, now about 9 months old.
The Grass Really Is Sometimes Green...
from page 1

different and that all librarianship is centered on human interactions.

Valerie Tucci, the Physical Sciences/Engineering Librarian at The College of New Jersey, comes from years of management at a small, very hierarchical corporate library. In her article, “Crossing the Bridge Connecting the Corporate and Academic Library Worlds,” she outlines the cultural and organizational differences between academic and special librarianship and describes her adjustment to academic life.

In “The Refugee Returns Home: An MLS in Corporate America,” Kate Kosturski, Instructional Services Coordinator for Europe at JSTOR, writes of her personal journey to librarianship, painting herself as one of the “refugees” from other fields.

Laura Harris, a Web trainer at Springshare, writes of her move from a large academic library to a small software company in “Joining the Dark Side.” In her article, she comments on the joys of working from a home office and the advantages of smaller organizations.

In “Lessons Learned,” Amira Aaron, Associate Dean, Scholarly Resources at Northwestern University Libraries, writes of a long career that has moved from academic libraries to the vendor world and back. She offers her prescription for insuring success in either camp and discusses the challenges ahead.

Finally, in “The Value of Experience,” Scott Smith reflects on a long career in book-vending and writes of his decision to return to the library world he so clearly loves. Along the way, he challenges the occasionally limited vision of library hiring committees who discount non-traditional experience.

Rumors
from page 6

John visited Charleston recently with the delightful Kim Robinson (Regional Director of Sales for the Southeast and MidAtlantic, ProQuest) and we had a grand old time talking about business, silent movies, and video games.

More from this side of the pond, following its acquisition by ALA publishing, Neal-Schuman shut down its New York City operations on March 22. Here are email addresses for key people at ALA who will be handling the Neal-Schuman imprint. Michael Jeffers, publisher <jeffers@ala.org> and Jill Davis, marketing manager <davis@ala.org>.

John Dove, the wonderful Mike Sweet caught me up on the status of the scholarly John Dove whose mother was a librarian, John was on his way to the London Book Fair. John is out of the hospital and bicycling away still after surgery on his hematoma from his bike accident and surgery to remove a small growth on his kidney. But you can’t keep a good Credo man down!

Was talking to the focused Audrey Powers the other day about a potential preconference before the 32nd Charleston Conference, and she told me that her son, Austin (remember him?) is curator of an art gallery in China. When he was a boy he fell in love with China and is now doing what he always wanted to do. Anyway, Austin was coming to Florida for a brief visit. BTW,

Future Dates for Charleston Conferences
Preconferences and Vendor Showcase Main Conference
2012 Conference 7 November 8-10 November
2013 Conference 6 November 7-9 November
2014 Conference 5 November 6-8 November
2015 Conference 4 November 5-7 November

And heard from the lovely Kathryn Suarez who will be moving to ABC-Clio after five years with Neal-Schuman.

The wonderful Mike Sweet caught me up on the status of the scholarly John Dove whose mother was a librarian, John was on his way to the London Book Fair. John is out of the hospital and bicycling away still after surgery on his hematoma from his bike accident and surgery to remove a small growth on his kidney. But you can’t keep a good Credo man down!

Was talking to the focused Audrey Powers the other day about a potential preconference before the 32nd Charleston Conference, and she told me that her son, Austin (remember him?) is curator of an art gallery in China. When he was a boy he fell in love with China and is now doing what he always wanted to do. Anyway, Austin was coming to Florida for a brief visit. BTW,

continued on page 26

people profile

Forrest Link

Acquisitions Librarian
The College of New Jersey
2000 Pennington Road, Ewing, NJ 08628
Phone: 609-771-2412 • <linkf@tcnj.edu>

BORN & LIVED: Except for one wayward year, I’ve lived my entire life in New Jersey.

EARLY LIFE: Pathologically happy.

FAMILY: Wife, Margaret; Two daughters, Adrianna (grad student at Johns Hopkins) and Alicia (soon-to-be-minted BFA from BU); Son, Jeremy (soon-to-be-unemployed philosopher with BA from Rowan).

EDUCATION: BA, Classics, Rutgers College; MA, Classics, Rutgers; MLS, Rutgers.

FIRST JOB: Movie theater usher (remember those?).

PROFESSIONAL CAREER AND ACTIVITIES: After getting my MLS, I was a cataloger for B&T before being detoured for nearly 30 years in vendorland as a rep for Midwest Library Service and Blackwell (remember them?).

IN MY SPARE TIME I LIKE TO: Sing with a local choir, read voraciously but not critically.

PET PEEVES/WHAT MAKES ME MAD: The smug and self-important.

PHILOSOPHY: Work hard, treat others decently, be grateful.

MOST MEANINGFUL CAREER ACHIEVEMENT: When Lyman Newlin remembered my name.

GOAL I HOPE TO ACHIEVE FIVE YEARS FROM NOW: Achieve tenure at TCNJ, understand Microsoft Access.

HOW/WHERE DO I SEE THE INDUSTRY IN FIVE YEARS: More heavily dependent on electronics with ongoing struggles to fund them. Lots more tablet readers (in both senses of the word).

Pictured above is Lainie Brown’s first granddaughter, Madison Olivia Brown, 7 weeks old. Congratulations Lainie!